Columbia Tech Tip # 105

- When finishing an exterior piece, it is always better to use an impregnator rather than a stain. An impregnator penetrates deeper into the wood and typically contains a biocide that prevents the growth of mold, algae and fungus. It can be tinted as well to add colour. If a stain is required, try to avoid stains with dyes in them as the dyes will fade quicker than the pigments causing the product to change colour over time.
